

Me and My Friends

Throughout high school and college I was able to find a couple communities in which I am able to feel comfortable in. I was able to meet people that accept me for who I am, want to be around me, and appreciate my presents. The people I met throughout high school helped me establish my identity, however, the people I met in college showed me that I could get along with many different personalities.

Here, we have me and my friends with the swords that we bought one another as a sign of friendship. We brought out our inner nerd and call ourselves the “Brotherhood of the Blade” and just had a fun photoshoot.

This is a photo of us after an intramural game, in which we take part in every year. We would play almost every sport offered such as: football, basketball, volleyball, and softball and is one of the ways we bond because we learn how to use each other's strengths and weaknesses and just have fun working as a team.

This is a picture of my and my roommates (from left to right: Jordan, Braxton, Krisnel, Luke, and me). I have roomed with the same people for the most part all four years of college and are just some of the people I cherish the most. We go on adventures together all the time whether that counts as watching T.V. together as a room to going out to eat. However, considering our very different personalities we go through a lot of obstacles getting use to one another, but at the end of the day we love each other and appreciate what each of us brings to the room.
